Dani Saveker returns with zest

Well-known manufacturer Dani Saveker has overseen a retail fit-out for a clothes outlet at the University of Birmingham's Guild of Students. Saveker, whose Birmingham family business of the same name went into administration in March, has set up as a self-employed business adviser. Savekers, based in Perry Barr, manufactured shopfittings in metalwork for 106 years and Dani Saveker has continued to support her customers when they have shopfitting requirements. She produced design concepts and worked on interior development for the guild's retail outlet ZEST. The guild has recently been developed to improve services and facilities.
